Delivering expert solutions in vacuum, surface & nanoscience since 1974

14/11/2019

Scanwel is recruiting: Territory Manager UK North.

Are you looking for a rewarding and interesting career with the opportunity for personal development? Scanwel is increasing its share in a growing market for our own manufactured and globally sourced technology leading products. Based on the edge of the beautiful Snowdonia National Park in North Wales, Scanwel is an established manufacturer of vacuum fabrications, chambers, kits & systems. We hold a considerable stock of in-house manufactured vacuum components and distribute leading globally sourced vacuum, surface & nanoscience products. Our customers include end users and o.e.m.s in academia, government laboratories and industry. Our products find application in the production and development of advanced materials and processes in a number of high technology fields, including: nanotechnology, microelectronics, storage media, energy production and bio-medical and basic materials research of metals, oxides, polymers, coatings, etc. We provide our customers with unique tools to solve challenging scientific and analysis problems and accelerate the development of new materials and products.

With relevant experience in the vacuum industry or knowledge of vacuum systems, components and good practice through a previous academic or industrial position, you will hopefully already be familiar with our company. Experience in the use or sales of surface science, surface analysis or deposition equipment would be an advantage, as would previous experience in other customer-facing or marketing roles. We are looking for a suitably qualified person to join our growing team to help us develop customer relationships primarily in the Midlands and North of UK to compliment our existing territory manager in the south of the country. Based at a remote or home office in the north or midlands, you will be self-sufficient, motivated and prepared to travel frequently to visit customers in the area north of Birmingham as well as the Scanwel office. A full UK driving licence is essential. Suitable applicants would normally possess a degree, masters or PhD in the physical sciences, but other relevant experience will be considered.

For a competitive remuneration package, including a choice of company car or allowance, please send applications, including a CV and covering letter to David Freeman david.freeman@scanwel.co.uk office: 01678 530281 mobile: 07775724288
